frontierAlt Oasis™ Global Income Fund

Management Discussion of Fund Performance

Investment Objectives

The Fund's principal investment objective is to provide investors with high current income and some long – term capital growth. The Fund invests principally in a diversified portfolio of securities of public companies located around the world and private and public global fixed-income securities, also known as a form of sukuk (sakk is the singular term of sukuk), in accordance with Islamic investment principles.

Investment Strategies

The Fund seeks to achieve its fundamental investment objective by investing in:

- (a) at least 60% of its portfolio in issues of income producing equity securities, such as dividend-paying equities of shari'ah-compliant companies (the "Shari'ah-Compliant Companies") within the Dow Jones Islamic Market Index (the "DJIMI"); and
- (b) up to 40% of the Fund's portfolio in securities of either public or private global fixed-income securities, also known as certain forms of sukuk considered to be in compliance with Islamic investment principles.

Risk

Please see the prospectus for a full discussion of the overall risk. The financial period saw no material changes affecting the overall level of risk.

Portfolio Manager Commentary

It's amazing the difference 12 months can make. Think of the economic outlook at this point last year; the big question in financial services was: how long can such good times last? Private equity firms were flush with cash and had no difficulty raising vast sums of capital to take over US and European companies. Investment banks were making huge profits and commercial banks lent freely to homeowners and consumers. The US economy continued to grow and there seemed to no end to rise in commodity prices, which created large sums of wealth in countries like Russia and the Middle East. Yes US housing prices began to fall, however this was seen as an isolated problem that would not spread into credit markets or affect other economies.

Recently, the US marketplace has had several difficult months and the rest of the world is coming to the realization that the shorter-term outlook is not bright. Central banks are still pouring liquidity into financial markets. Only the Middle East and Asia seem to be in calm waters. The major risk going into 2008 is the financial crisis lingers on and may get worse before it gets better. Another risk is the persistent high inflation which could destabilize the global bond market. Higher inflation will also place constraints on monetary policy. This in turn could make a downturn harder and longer and the banking crisis more severe. The problem is not the headline inflation rate but rather the rise in inflationary expectations.

Therefore, most troubled businesses in 2008 are still likely to be the banks, which will continue to suffer from writedowns and lack of liquidity. The lack of confidence in the banking industry will continue to leak into cyclicals; the auto industry is already suffering and could spread into other durable goods and consumer discretionary items. The companies that will do well are most likely to be globally diversified; they should have stronger revenue growth as they escape tepid consumer markets in their own country. The commodity boom should continue albeit at a slower pace. However, all is not lost, in these bleak times it becomes easier for value investors to find cheap assets in dislocated markets and troubled industries.

The prospect of a recession looming over the horizon is just as much a reality as stagflation was a concern when Ben Bernanke (before becoming Chairman of the Federal Reserve) gave his famous speech about dropping bags of money from a helicopter.

As all good things must come to an end, and the end to this party is leaving many in the infirmary. Subprime loans made to unqualified borrowers and investors unwittingly buying repackaged securities on the premise they were triple-A rated debt instruments are all feeling the effects of fear after enjoying their moment of euphoric greed.

Given the aggressive actions taken by the US Fed, we continue to believe that we are in a moderate slowdown and that these actions will lead to an inflation cycle that will be more benefit equity markets. As such we have moderately increased exposure to cash.

Recent Developments

Independent Review Committee

Under the provision of National Instrument 81-107 – Independent Review Committee for Investment Fund (“NI 81-107”), which came into force on November 1, 2006 it is now required that all publicly offered investment funds, such as the Fund, establish an independent review committee (“IRC”) to whom the Manager is to refer all conflict of interest matters in order to obtain a recommendation or approval, as applicable. NI 81-107 further mandates that the IRC be composed of at least three independent members and requires that they conduct assessments and regularly report to the Manager and unitholders in respect of its duties. The manager appointed its three person IRC on May 1, 2007, but was not required to be in full compliance with NI 81-107 prior to November 1, 2007. The independent members of the Fund’s IRC are Andrew Jones (Chair), Zareer Pavri and Michael Singer.

Accounting Policy Change

In the preparation of its financial statements from January 1, 2007 onwards, the Fund adopted CICA Handbook Section 3855, Financial Instruments-Recognition Measurement, which includes new requirements for both valuing securities and accounting for transaction costs such as brokerage commissions. The new requirements would also affect the calculation of the Fund’s net asset value for investor transaction purposes. The Canadian Securities Administrators (“CSA”) has proposed amendments to its regulations. If enacted, these amendments would allow the Fund to adopt Section 3855 without affecting the method by which the Fund’s net asset values are calculated. In the meantime, the CSA has granted all investment funds a temporary exemption from adopting this new accounting standard, leaving the calculation of the net asset value unchanged.
